A marriage may be annulled for any of the following causes existing at the time of marriage:

The Court may at the time of granting the annulment or at any future time, make necessary orders for the custody and support of said child or children as the circumstances and surroundings of the parents may require.

SECTION 19-2-4. Conclusiveness of Judgment of Annulment.

A judgment of annulment of a marriage is conclusive only as against the parties to the action and those claiming under them.

CHAPTER 3. DIVORCE

SECTION 19-3-1. Divorce and Annulment Procedure.

Proceedings in divorce and annulment shall be commenced and conducted in the manner provided by law for civil cases, except as otherwise specifically provided. A final decree of divorce shall restore the parties to the status of unmarried persons.

(i) Permanent insanity of the defendant; provided, however, that no divorce shall be granted on this ground unless the defendant has been duly and regularly adjudged insane by a court of competent jurisdiction and such insanity reasonably appears to be permanent; further, no divorce shall be granted on this ground unless a guardian ad litem has been appointed to represent the defendant in the divorce proceedings;

(j) Pregnancy of the wife by another person at the time of the marriage, if the husband did not know of such pregnancy; or

(k) Incompatibility (No Fault)

(1) "Incompatibility" exists when, because of discord or conflict of personalities, the legitimate ends of the marriage relationship are destroyed and there is no reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

(2) If the parties to a divorce proceeding represent to the Court by sworn pleading(s) that incompatibility exists and that they desire a divorce on such ground, the Court shall, without requiring an evidentiary hearing on the question of incompatibility, enter an appropriate decree of divorce, which decree shall also dispose of, or reserve for later disposition, all matters respecting property, debts, custody, visitation, support, alimony and such related issues as the Court may deem appropriate.

(3) If any party to a divorce proceeding represents to the Court that "incompatibility" of the parties does not exist, no decree of divorce on such ground may be entered without an evidentiary hearing upon which the Court will determine whether the incompatibility of the parties has been proven.

SECTION 19-3-4. Limitations.

A divorce must be denied in all cases when there is an unreasonable lapse of time before the commencement of the action, or two years have passed since the grounds became or should have become known to the complaining party and subsequent actions thereto on the part of the complainant indicate condonation of the activity or situation, provided that this limitation shall not apply to a divorce proceeding on grounds of incompatibility.

SECTION 19-3-5. Right of Husband to Divorce.

The husband may in all cases obtain a divorce from his wife for the same causes and in the same manner as the wife may obtain a divorce from her husband.

SECTION 19-3-6. Alimony and Suit Money; Restraint.

(a) The court may order either party to pay the clerk for the benefit of the other party a sum of money for the separate support and maintenance of the adverse party and the children, and to enable such party to prosecute and defend the action.

SECTION 19-3-7. Pleadings; Findings; Decree.

The complaint shall be in writing and signed by the plaintiff or the plaintiff's counsel or attorney. No decree of divorce shall be granted except upon legal evidence taken in the cause by the Court who shall make and file its findings and decree upon the evidence, provided that this requirement of proof shall not be applicable to divorce proceedings resolved:

Subsequent changes or new orders may be made by the court with respect to the custody of the children or the distribution of property as shall be reasonable and proper.

(b) The purpose of alimony is not punitive, but may be ordered by the Court as necessary on a temporary basis to enable a spouse in need to secure additional job skills, education, training or medical treatment toward the end of becoming self-supportive, provided, that in the case of an aged or ill spouse of limited means and limited employment options, permanent alimony may be required as the Court deems just under the circumstances taking into account the relative financial status and obligations of the parties, the duration of the marriage and such other factors as the Court deems appropriate.

SECTION 19-3-9. Custody of Children in Case of Separation.

In any case of separation of husband and wife having minor children, or whenever a marriage is declared void or dissolved, the court shall make such order for the future care and custody of the minor children as it may deem just and proper. In determining custody, the court shall consider the best interests of the child and the past conduct and demonstrated moral standards of each of the parties and the natural presumption that the mother is best suited to care for young children. The court may inquire of the children and take into consideration the children's desires regarding the future custody; however, such expressed desires shall not be controlling and the court may nevertheless, determine the children's custody otherwise, provided, that for any child over the age of 14, the child's preference as to custody shall be binding on the Court.

(b) During the pendency of the action the court may order the husband to pay temporary alimony and suit money as in an action for divorce.

SECTION 19-4-4. Custody of Children and Property.

(a) Absent a judicial decree of property distribution or custody or otherwise, neither the husband or the wife can remove the other or the children from the place of family dwelling without the consent of the other, provided, however, that children may be removed from the family residency by one parent without the consent of the other if such appears to be reasonably necessary to protect the physical well being of the children, the children are thereafter provided with a more proper living environment, and application is made to the Court within ten days for an order of the court, modifiable at any time, approving such removal of the children.,

(b) If a husband abandons his wife, the wife is entitled to custody of all children under the age of sixteen (16) unless a court of competent
